Expression of inducible nitric oxide synthase in human adipocytes regulates glucose-induced production of nitric oxide and adiponectin. Adipocytes are involved in the production of inflammatory mediators, including nitric oxide (NO), in obesity. Here we examined the potential involvement of inducible nitric oxide synthase (iNOS) expression in NO production and the secretion of adiponectin in insulin-resistant human adipocytes stimulated by exogenous glucose. NO was produced during a 16-h incubation of human primary preadipocytes and preadipocyte-derived immortalized human adipocytes (IHAS1 cells) in high glucose (HG; 25 or 50 mmol/l). Inhibition of iNOS by 1400W (50 micromol/l) increased insulin-stimulated glucose uptake by 3.7 +/- 0.3 and 4.9 +/- 0.3% in preadipocytes and IHAS1 cells, respectively. Furthermore, inhibition of iNOS with 1400W decreased glucose-induced NO production by 38.2 +/- 4.5 and 53.2 +/- 4.2% in preadipocytes and IHAS1 cells, respectively. The decreased NO production was associated with a reduction in adiponectin gene expression, but not in expression of other adipokines, in IHAS1 cells. In addition, inhibition of iNOS reduced protein expression of insulin receptor beta (Insr), phosphatidylinositol 3- 82138339de
